“ I've known Mike since I started having memories. He was my cousin. My slightly older cousin (he was 5 months older). We grew up watching captain Kangaroo, Popeye, and other stuff kids did in the early 1960s. He was the first to have a color TV. I was jealous. We went through every grade in school together. After high school, we went our separate ways for awhile. He went to diesel mechanic school and I went to UT Austin. He decided shortly thereafter that he wanted to be a petroleum land manger and then a geologist. He enrolled in Southwest Texas State. He went there for a couple of years then he transferred to UT Austin. We lived together for 1 semester and then he moved back to a dorm on campus. I graduated and took a job in north Austin. I had a boat and almost every evening in the summer he would have the boat gassed up and ready to go after I got off work. We water skied all summer. Those were great times. He would graduate shortly thereafter and move away. We saw each other infrequently over the rest of his life. Two memorable skiing trips to Jackson Hole Wyoming (Snow skiing this time), and 1 to Arizona come to mind. The times we had growing up and in college and the few years after will always be unforgettable. I miss my cousin and I miss my friend. Rest in Peace
